Growing fresh produce is governed by the weather. Some years ripening can be a little earlier or later than usual.

Summer
Summer is the time of year when the Valley is bursting with high quality fresh produce. The crunchiest, freshest table grapes are in abundance. Watermelons, rockmelons, tomatoes, sweet corn, mangoes, figs, peaches and apricots are just a few of the treasures grown under clear blue skies in the clean fresh air of the Swan Valley. Bite into the biggest ruby red figs at Rangeview Vineyards and savor the crisp crunch of a vine ripened melon from one of many roadside stalls.

Winter
Winter is the time of the year citrus such as oranges, limes, mandarins, lemons and cumquats are all ripening on the trees producing the sweetest and juiciest fruit. Strawberries are also at their peak during the cooler winter months. Stalls such as West Swan Fresh, Toltich and Nguyen have supplies direct from the fields. It is also time for olive oils freshly pressed from local trees and purple garlic, full of flavour, is ready to be harvested.

Autumn
The cooler Autumn weather marks the end of vintage for winemakers and the end of harvest season for our table grape growers and some fruit and vegetable growers. You will see the grape vines being pruned ready for dormancy over the colder winter months. Other growers are starting to plant peas, broad beans, herbs and other fruits and vegetables in preparation for a spring harvest. March is also when pumpkins, mangoes and pomegranates ripen in the Swan Valley. The unique pomegranate fruit, sought after by chefs, is delicious fresh or made into syrup.

Spring
The first tips of asparagus, one of the most sought after crops of the season, marks the start of spring. Both green and purple asparagus flourish in the Swan Valley. Broad beans, peas, zucchini, beetroot, rhubarb and eggplants are in abundance. Spring wildflowers appear on the scarp. Plum, peach and apricot trees are in full blossom. Our beekeepers will be gathering honey from the bee hives to bring you the freshest most natural honey possible.

FRESH TABLE GRAPES
Table grapes have drawn people to the Swan Valley every summer for generations. Today viticulture is still a major part of the rural ambience and economy of the Swan Valley. Table grape season generally runs from late December to mid-April. Some of the main varieties of table grapes grown in the Swan Valley are Flame Seedless, Crimson Seedless, Scarletta Seedless, Sweet Celebration®, Dawn Seedless, Midnight Beauty®, and Autumn Crisp®.
As well as the new wave of seedless grapes, the old world traditional vintage varieties of Muscat, Currants and Cardinals continue to be grown and are still a firm favourite with many people.

To pick your own produce straight from the ground or the tree is a taste experience you will never forget. There are many outlets preserve their seasonal produce by way of drying, pickling or preserving. Fruit jams, chili pastes, pickeles and dried grapes can all be found in the Valley. At Edgecombe Brothers (est. 1925) they follow family recipes to pickle their estate grown olives; they also make beetroot relish and delicious grape jam. Enjoy a regional foodie experience every day. No matter when you visit there will always be something fresh, ripe and in season ready for you to enjoy. By eating locally-grown food you are supporting farmers and producers and investing your food dollars in the community.

OPEN ALL YEAR
The Swan Valley has outlets open all year that offer a wide range of fresh produce.
At the Swan Valley Gin Company you can taste gin that has been infused with locally grown cumquats. Iconic Australian macadamia nuts can be enjoyed at Bauldin’s Cottage where you can also book a tour of the orchard. Honey fresh from the hive, olive oils, freshly squeezed juices, ciders, goat's milk, nuts and farm fresh eggs with golden yolks are just a few of the products available to be purchased at roadside stalls and outlets all year round.
